Just 9kms from the delightful market town of St Jean du Gard, in the beautiful Gardon valley, lies this stunning chateau, which dates back to the late 12th century. The chateau is set in around 200 acres of the Cevennes National Park; an area of unspoilt natural beauty and outstanding wildlife. The main chateau has been divided into four

DESCRIPTION

Saint-Jean-du-Gard is an authentic Cévenol village in a wonderfully preserved natural setting; a paradise for walkers, cyclists and all lovers of the outdoors. This was the last stop on Robert Louis Stevenson's famous "Travels with a Donkey in the Cevennes", which ended in St-Jean in 1878. The village today offers a pleasant mix of shops, cafés, restaurants and also has a post office, banks, a doctor's surgery and a primary school.

Just 9km from the village, this unique property enjoys a dominant position overlooking an unspoilt valley above the Gardon river. A section of the Gardon actually flows through the extensive grounds of the property, providing idyllic spots for swimming or fishing.

The property consists of the main chateau and several outbuildings, which together offer nearly 600m² of living space and over 200m² of cellars, barns and stores. The main chateau offers the following:

The main apartment; a beautifully appointed 3-bedroom residence comprising:

- The 65m² main lounge/dining room with a huge fireplace and a balcony running the full length of the face, offering spectacular views of the pool terrace and valley.
- A master bedroom with en suite bathroom & WC.
- A farmhouse style fitted kitchen with access to the dining room and central courtyard.
- 2 further double bedrooms.
- A family bathroom with WC.

The guardian's cottage. Accessed either from the courtyard or via its own private access from the outside, this cottage of...
