DESCRIPTION

This architect designed, recently converted granite barn offers spacious, comfortable and flexible accommodation. Retaining the traditional character of the region, yet light and airy, the barn has been sympathetically and thoughtfully converted. Built into a slope it has access to the exterior on both levels. The ground floor with its main entrance to the house also has the main entrance to an independent adjoining apartment, currently used as a gîte. The lower ground floor is accessed internally via stairs and additionally, externally around the side of the house.

The main entrance opens to a large double-height living room, with a vaulted ceiling and exposed beams, highlighting its original characteristics. The stone walls are apparent on the south side, the ancient oak 'A' frame carpentry displayed against the white walls and ceilings. Rural views to north and south extend to the forests and hills beyond.

Leading from the living room, along the hallway, there is a large double bedroom, with a family bathroom opposite. This has a bath incorporating a shower, toilet and sink and a useful storage cupboard. An office space is situated next to the bathroom.

The interior access to the apartment is situated at the far end of the hallway.

Above, the light and airy mezzanine master bedroom has a dressing area leading to a bathroom with shower, wash basin and toilet.

The triple aspect independent apartment/gîte, has an open plan kitchen, with integrated appliances, and am...
